Weekend Classic rewards players who make good decisions before the first pitch. The opening six-game stretch can shape the whole run, so do not build around big names alone. You need pitchers you can read, hitters whose swings feel natural, and enough speed to cover mistakes in the field. If you are filling a few gaps in Diamond Dynasty, MLB 26 stubs can help you finish the lineup without settling for a poor fit.

Build the rotation around comfort

Tarik Skubal is a strong left-handed anchor. His sinker and circle changeup force awkward swings, especially when you work both sides of the plate. Johan Santana gives you a different look, with a fastball that can reach 99 mph and a slow changeup that ruins timing. Ranger Suarez is useful when opponents stack switch hitters. From the right side, Dustin May is the standout because his delivery is hard to pick up. Ryan Sloan brings a 101 mph fastball, sinker, and cutter, while Felix Hernandez remains a steady choice when you want control and dependable per-9 ratings.

Save the bullpen for the right moments

Trevor Hoffman should be high on most relief lists. His circle changeup can finish at-bats against either side of the plate. Jonathan Broxton supplies velocity, though you will need to aim carefully. Keith Foulke works well as a matchup arm, particularly with his strong clutch rating against left-handed hitters. Billy Wagner is the main left-handed answer, thanks to his fastball and sharp changeup. Brooks Raley changes the pace, and Erik Miller adds a deceptive delivery with a tough sinker. Aaron Ashby is a useful lower-cost option when you need a lefty who can face right-handed bats.

Prioritise swings, range, and lineup balance

Victor Martinez is the premier offensive catcher, but Adley Rutschman gives you more comfort behind the plate without sacrificing switch-hitting ability. Jason Varitek and Ethan Salas are also worth a look. At first base, Albert Pujols, David Ortiz, Stan Musial, Kyle Schwarber, and Miguel Cabrera all bring serious damage. Ray Durham and Jeff McNeil make second base flexible, while Troy Tulowitzki, Jesus Made, Leo De Vries, and Josuar Gonzalez give shortstop plenty of speed and power. Angel Genao, Adrian Beltre, Franklin Arias, and Nolan Arenado cover third base in very different ways. A quick comparison helps when you are choosing between similar cards: Position - Primary choices - Main strength: Catcher - Martinez, Rutschman - hitting or defence; Shortstop - Tulowitzki, Made - power or speed; Centre field - Beltran, Jones - range and switch-hitting; DH - Alvarez, Soto - contact and power.

Use the final spots with a clear plan

Carlos Beltran is still a superb centre fielder, while Andruw Jones offers excellent defence and a reliable swing. Mike Sirota and Max Clark are better fits when speed matters. In the corners, Mike Trout, Theo Gillen, Ken Singleton, Cody Bellinger, and Zyhir Hope let you add more offence without asking them to cover centre field every inning. Yordan Alvarez is the obvious designated hitter when you want maximum power. Juan Soto gives you a quicker swing and better all-field contact. Lance Berkman and the Finest Carlos Beltran are smart alternatives if you want switch-hitting production. Test the players in a few games first; a card that looks perfect on paper may not suit your timing. Spending carefully on cheap MLB 26 stubs is most useful when it helps you buy a player you will actually trust in the late innings.
